Subject: Fw: Fwd: [Video-bd] Banner Ads Requested by Content Partners - Process

Hi-
Hope you are having a nice 4th. Take a look at the below. If we wanted to use the banner inventory to promote partners' content on UGC watch pages, is that something we can do? Who makes that policy decision?

We could use that inventory.
Let me know what you think.

It is different in the mind of Suzie and the compliance folks. Let's take the example of Warner Bros. They could be promoting a movie for new release by buying those units. If we give them away as part of a content deal, we are just undercutting the sales group. That may not be the most rational decisionmaking, but it is something they feel strongly about.

On the UGC side: The policy since january is to run nothing other than house ads promoting the YT service in UGC. If you are asking to change the policy, that's fine, we can look into it so that we are giving partners what they need to drive audiences to their content.

We have about 400MM idling banner impressions daily which we *badly* need to turn into promotional tools. If we can't do search/category pages .. fine, but at the bare minimum we should get all UGC pages.

Banners and PVAs are really not any different from dir video thumbnails. They just look a bit different .. but they serve the same purpose.

Happy to discuss. Looking at the trail here, I think Sandy may have lost some meaning in translation. However, they REALLY have a problem with banners on search watch pages.

Front page and now search PVAs are also highly problematic. I told her to check with Eva before any policy is set to make sure that was the case.

Are you giving out those top masthead banners in search? Every conversation I have had with a partner promotion rotation is limited to director's videos, which stated below are still kosher. Front page and now search PVAs are also highly problematic.

This would apply to all banner advertisement. This is interesting, when I approached Jordan about this, he said he didn't think any SPDs were giving these out but that Director's Videos were the only promos given out. The way you're positioning the below, it makes it sound like it's quite common. Jordan was fully on board with our policy.

why we need it to go through like a media buy? This ensures that we're sox compliant and operationally coordinated.

Hi Sandy

It would be the same concept as dir videos, just another form of promotion. We absolutely need this in our deal making (since we don't pay out much or even offer MGs). Thx - [p]

PS - why was this scrapped btw?

Hi Philip - I've removed everyone from the email thread except for Talia.

Could you give more clarification on what these promotional offerings are? Our policy would include all banner advertisements. This does not apply to director's videos (the policy on how Director's Video will be given out will be looked at separately)

Thanks,
Sandy

Hi Sandy

Could you please confirm that this does not include promotional offerings (typically in lieu of MG..) as part of content licensing deals. Thx - [p]

Hi Team,

Please note that going forward, if your content partner requests any banner advertisement (including those on contests and groups) or PVA, they will have to purchase them like any other media buy. Please reach out to [REDACTED] to get assistance coordinating the campaign.

Please let me or Talia know if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Sandy
